

SANDFORD AWARD

Anita Fox

Anita has a wide range of experience working in history and heritage learning and her current role is Learning and Engagement Manager at Chatsworth House, Derbyshire where she is developing and coproducing new learning offers, outreach and community engagement opportunities. Following a varied and rewarding career as a history, humanities and sociology teacher and deputy headteacher in the secondary school sector, Anita returned to university to study for her masters in Heritage Education at BGU. In this she was inspired by the many visits she had taken students on and the enjoyment she has for visiting heritage sites, museums and galleries. Anita then took up a role for 7 years as Learning Manager for the Lincolnshire County Council Culture Service sites, including Lincoln Castle, Lincoln Museum, Usher Gallery and Museum of Lincolnshire Life. Her passion and enthusiasm for heritage learning continues and supporting the Sandford Award programme is a privilege.
