

SANDFORD AWARD

Christopher Green

Christopher is Executive Director of Gulf Education Services, a company leading improvement projects internationally for government-affiliated agencies, regional groups and private companies involved in quality sustainability. Formerly he was the Education Adviser for Dubai government's 'Dubai Knowledge'. Prior, he held top posts in English local authorities, namely London's academically most highly achieving London Borough of Bromley; and led the major privatization of services as statutory Chief Education Officer and Director of Education and Community Services in Walsall.

A frequently published writer, his main book, The Privatization of State Education is the authoritative practical appraisal of this 'privatizing' process. Innovative schooling remains close to his heart, as does his passion for environmental and heritage education where he continues his many years as a City of London guide-lecturer, a freeman of the livery Company of Educators, a judge for HET and a trustee for advancing education in Tanzania.
