

SANDFORD AWARD

Jan Barratt

Jan has recently retired from her role as Learning and Participation Manager at The National Tramway Museum to focus on family life and heritage consultancy roles. At the Tramway Museum, Jan created and built the learning packages which guided the museum to attain the Sandford Award for the first time in 2011.

A former teacher, Jan has taught in both primary schools and adult education. She has managed a volunteer centre, worked in safety education at the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents and run her own business.

Her interests and expertise lie with the development of inclusive interpretation and learning programmes for both formal and informal learning for all age groups. She is passionate about creating engaging and memorable heritage learning experiences for all ages and abilities.

Away from the world of museums and heritage Jan enjoys dance, especially performing, and is a keen amateur artist.
